

Climate Change and Education

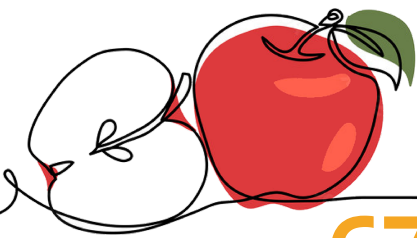

67%

of Canadians

think schools need to give climate change education a high priority

64% of Canadians

think the education system should be doing "a lot more" to educate young people about climate change

67% of Canadians

agree that Climate change education should be the role of all teachers across subjects and grades

Only very few Canadians (15%) felt that the topic of climate change was too complex to be taught in the younger grades

75% of Canadians

agree that climate change education should aim to change the way people behave

Canadians believe that climate change education should increasingly integrate Indigenous traditional knowledge (52%), and focus on the connection between social, racial, and gender inequality (48%)

